CANADIAN HISTORY . . . SWEET AND SOUR

PEKING Over cups of tea served in the reception room of Peking's No. 31 middle school, a group of 20 high school students from Hamilton yesterday heard one of the most remarkable potted histories of Canada that a Canadian abroad is ever likely to hear

The amateur historian, a 15-year-old Red Guard named Hou Ning, told his listeners that while Canada and China have different social systems today, they share a common past of imperialist exploitation.

Answering a Hamilton student who asked whether Chinese students studied other social systems than their own, Hou said he had leagued how British imperialists had carried out exploitation and oppression" in Canada during the days of

'I learned, too, how after many years of suffering the Canadian people fought with the American people against British imperialism, overthrowing their masters and winning their independence," he said with a short run-through of Canadian history from the days of the Loyalist settlers in Upper Canada to the Statute of Westminster, in the event, however, the topic changed before any of them spoke out and the session wore on to a close without a challenge being offered.

Later, some of the students were kicking themselves for saying nothing, while others, told that Hou had picked up his understanding of Canadian history from his sparetime read-ing, felt it was just as well that nobody had embarrassed him for what could have been an honest confusion between American and Canadian history.

Confusion or not, it was abvious that the students found better-rememoered experiences that the students will have ring their times weeks in China.

Now approaching the midway point of the tour, the таннация принципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринципринциприн dustrial centre of Wuhan on the middle reaches of the Yangtse, and Shihchiachuang, site of a memorial to Norman Bethune, before reaching Peking. From here they go on to Tientsin, a port city east of the capital, and Shanghai, before beginning their journey home.

Already the students have seen a good cross-section of Chinese life. They have visited factories and communes, toured every kind of educational institution from kindergarten to university, and been to hospitals to see-major surgery performed with actipunctural anesthesia. They have attended revolutionary operas, ballets and concerts and toured some of Cuina's constanding historical landmarks.

It is not however. The itinerary that is remarkable so much as the students. The first high school group ever to visit China from North America since Communist rule was established and one of only a small number of teen-age groups from anywhere in the world ever to be granted visas, the Hamilton youngsters are clearly guinea pigs and a success.

Poor Hou may have been one example of this. Irene Wostow a 19-year-old from Delta secondary school, gave another when recalling the students' visit to the university of Wuhan. "Mas Wolfow said that students at the university were very chartly about familiar things such as their family life but had little to say when the subject turned to things more remote.

"They had no idea who Napoleon was, or even Hitler," she said "I talked to one girl about Paris and she had to ask

Andy Sweck, 17, from Scott Park secondary school, reported a similar experience while visiting the No. 28 middle school in Schilchiachuang. During the tour the conversation turned to philosophy, "but when I mentioned Rousseau and Locke their faces went blank," Mr. Sweck recalled.

In the retelling the Hamilton student quotes himself as teking the Chinese students off:

"I told them that they constantly talk about the need for them as good Marxists, to have a proper spirit of internationalism, but when it comes to philosophers the only ones they'd ever heard of were Marx, Lenin and Mao Tse-tung. I told them that wasn't consistent with true internationalism."

After a visit to a Peking kindergarten a number of students who had been impressed by the keetiness they had seen in schools and universities expressed reservations about seeing the same thing among tots of three and four.

Ready for the Curtain

At a news conference following his return from the spectacular, utterly "non-political" cabinet tour of the province, Premier Bennett clearly announced the issue with which he no doubt will go to the voters in the very near future. It is not a new one, but it is one which. has served him well in one guise or another

Mr. Bennett denounced pressure groups and declared that the people of this province need never fear such groups since "the government that I lead will never yield to the force of pressure groups because a government worthy of its salt must oppose pressure groups . . ." Submission to them, said Mr. Bennett, could result in anarchy and chaos, "and that is the issue in the province today." So there we have it.

The pressure groups which Mr. Bennett needed for an issue came obligingly to the fore during the motor tour. They were labor protesters, rejecting the government's move to impose binding arbitration on the unions in order to end the construction strike that has tied up building across British Columbia for five weeks. The protesters couldn't have done a better job for Mr. Bennett. They became more unruly toward the end of the tour, and ended by hassling and attacking the ministers and injuring one, Agriculture Minister Shelford, who surely was the least involved in the question at issue.

Mr. Bennett's chief threat at the polls has always been the CCF and its successor the NDP. And since the NDP and the labor unions have long been comrades in arms - although occasionally with some discomfort - it will be easy in the election campaign to link his political rivals with the rowdies who roughed up some government members of this province and broke a bone in the shoulder of a minister. The fight against the NDP will become a fight against chaos and anarchy with only Mr. Bennett to save us.

Now, if the unions will obligingly keep the pot bubbling for Mr. Bennett until he is ready to name the election date, everything will be in order for another ride on the white charger. It's an act which has never failed to pack 'em in, timed to perfection and played by

Will it block off the southern view from the Johnson Street Bridge area? Only in these contexts can the real effect of the buildings be gauged, and this is not provided by the little model.

For the rest, one can only hope that nothing approaching the garish colors of the artist's sketch will be permitted in reality. Without careful handling, the rows of little bay windows on the facades could give a shiny "cute" look to the towers. The colored sketch leaves an observer with the impression of a pair of giant Wurlitzers facing each other, waiting only for a couple of dimes to send them into a rumbling rendition of "Wharf Street Blues."

DAVID HUMPHREYS

The Basic British Question

Britain's nationalized railways can be found around Platform 8 at King's Cross station-any day between 6 a.m and 6 p.m.

His name is George Smith, a railman with 15 years' service. His basic wage is $44 a week, but by working 72 hours or more every week, George can raise it to $97 gross, with take-home pay of $77.

He is one of 20,000 men servicing trains for $44 under a contract the re negotiation of which has brought his mion into full-scale conflict with the British government. By working to rule, that is, refusing to work 32 hours a week vertime, he has contributed to that British phenomenon, "rail chaos," or more generally "industrial anarchy."

George can look forward to a raise soon, to $51 a week basic, and if the union gets its way, it may even be back-dated to May 1. This has been the only point separating union and management, which is nothing out for June 1 with its new contract. The railway says the difference is $1) million which it does not have, and it is supported by the government's accusing the union of "arrogance and sheer bloody-mindedness.

Shared Toilet

George is unmoved. He lives with his wife and three young children in a damp apartment in Clapton, East London, The apartment has two bedrooms, a living room and kitchen; no bathroom. The family shares a toilet with another

He pays $17 a week rent, gives his wife $40 for food and housekeeping, leaves $20 to meet credit payments on a car and furniture and the finer things of like an occasional pint of ale finitely less than once a week") and a ticket to watch Arsenal.

If Mrs. Smith insists on buying the tradiditional British roast of beef for the weekend, she will pay $3 for two pounds of beef at current prices. Perhaps she will switch to New Zealand lamb at 97 cents a pound. Milk for the children costs 30 cents a quart. The Daily Mirror's "she survey tells her, if she didn't know, that the prices have risen 19 per cent in the last 18 months, and 117 grocery price increases have been recorded this week.

"I certainly don't want to work 12 hours a day," says George, "but personally I will do it as often as I possibly can. It's the force of circumstances, I three children, I couldn't manage at all otherwise, could I?"

Quite offen he worked Sundays, leaving only an hour in the evenings to see his family. "I don't see enough of my children, to be quite honest with you." Even holidays are spent apart for savings. "The wife usually takes the children up to her mother's in PeterLorough." George gets three weeks paid holidays a

He works long hours because he has an ambition to buy a house and he has been saving to that end for eight years. In another two years, with a little help-from parents, he reckons he may be able to buy - if he's very lucky.

I know of a couple who bought a house near London in March for $20,000. could sell it today, they rejoice, for $45,000. I also know a young man, Roger, who expects to be a sterling millionaire by the time he's 30, Unlike George, he had a little money to put into property speculation. Britain is divided between the Georges and the Rogers.

Prime Minister Edward Heath's gov ernment for nearly two years has battled inflation and the bloody-mindedness of George and his mates, neither with much success. The powers of the new Industrial Relations Act have been exhausted. After arbitration, a cooling-off period and a secret strike ballot, the confrontation is as rigid as ever, if not worse.

For the first time union leaders are eleared of the charge that they are act-mass rank-and-file support. The first ballot, demanded by the government, asking them if they were in favor of continu-ing industrial action, supported union leaders by majorities of 6 to 1 and 22 to

Mr. Heath's government, digging in for yet another fight, has let it be known there is no question of "giving in" to the unions' "all or nothing" intransigence.
Mr. Heath told a Conservative rally the other day: "Let no one ask this government to surrender. If there is anyone who imagines they can, for political purposes, pick an easy fight with us, I warn them 'You've come to the wrong place, You're wasting your time'."

Disparities

Two of Britain's most brilliant columnists, hot noted for their union sympathies, have taken up the point. Writing in The Times, Bernard Levin asked, "Has (Mr. Heath) any idea what a man earning $20 a week feels when he sees speculators about to make untold millions by befouling Piccadilly Circus and Covent Garden and indeed any other bits of any other cities that they can get their hands on? What sort of a society is it that says dockers are holding the nation to ransom by striking, but does not say that developers are doing so by keeping office blocks empty until the rent has risen high enough to satisfy their Peregrine Worsthorne, right-wing col-umnist and deputy editor of The Sunday Telegraph, wrote: "Whether or not the country can afford to pay (the railway men) the increase demanded is not the point. The point is that a basic wage of $20 a week — whatever the take-home packet may be — is not enough to produce a bourgeois reaction of responsible restraint. It is unreasonable to expect workers at this kind of level not to feel militant, particularly in the present tense economic climate ... ways the class war is more of a reality than it was before the war."

The Trades Union Congress estimates 2.4 million workers take home less than £20 ($51) a week. They watch in anger and frustration while others reap handsome profits. The real problem facing the Heath government is not so much standing up to the unions" as finding a way to pay the working man a wage for a 40-hour week that is in line with the cert incidents emerged from Vancouver earlier this week, two important figures were presented. Inside the Pacific Coliseum Saturday night an orderly audience of 17,000, mainly young people, behaved themselves. Outside, an estimated 2,500 misbehaved — some to the extent of criminal violence. For every young lout involved in riotous action, about seven persons conducted themselves properly at the concert.

Even among the 2,500, there were some, with good reasons for anger if they had been sold counterfeit tickets, as the reports indicated. It is nevertheless disthe opportunity to initiate and stimulate. violence - a crude, mindless kind of violence symbolized by the Molotov cocktails some of them had prepared.

Nobody, thank heaven, has yet argued that the militants were Communistinspired and part of a world-wide conspiracy to destroy society. So far, puble-makers have been stamped only as indigenous hoodlums. Since they were unable to gain admission to the concert area, they cannot have been inspired by the allegedly near-hypnotic influence with which some people have endowed the Rolling Stones. The hoods were looking for trouble and they did their best to

Grubby Wrappings

So perhaps the Vancouver incident has stripped away some of the torn and grubby wrapping paper with which certain modern experts have bundled up the so-called "youth revolt" of current times. Apart from the extremes to which some participants went, was the hoodlumism outside the Pacific Coliseum so very much different from the hoodlumism some youngsters used to demonstrate in a more distant day of rampant vandalism on Halloween - or on any other occasion when a percentage of juveniles assumed the right to flout the law and go on sprees of destruction? There's a great deal of difference in degree between the youngster of an earlier generation who wrenched a gate from its moorings on Halloween and the young thug who heaves a Molotov cocktail at police officers trying to preserve the peace. But both demonstrate unruli-

gang that years ago pried a section of the Ross Bay seawall into the salt chuck was moving a shade beyond a "boyish

The comparison supports a belief held by some of us that children, like all peo-ple, contain in their ranks some pretty anti-social specimens. Whether the cause is genetic or environmental, or both, I from the abandonment of the bland explanation by some moop-faced soft-heads, that "there are no bad boys; only misur derstood boys". There are bad boys.

Misunderstood — or bad?

Anyone who thinks the goons tossing Molotov cocktails were just misunder stood are monumentally misunderstanding themselves.

The sociologist and the psychologist may offer explanations of the apparent ncrease in violence to which some children and young people are prone today. The layman will continue to wonder if it not an exaggeration of the age-old effort by the very young to claim attention. In earlier times there were — and I believe there still are - acceptable forms for these efforts, Conventionally-the bright student or the skilled athlete won plaudits from his peers.

Under-achievers, as today's vernacu lar calls them, might not shine in any of the fields that earned praise from their elders, but the yen to be noticed was not eliminated by this inability. If they couldn't gain attention one way, they'd seek it another. Hence the bravado of the town's "bad boys"

They attained notoriety. They were talked about. And inevitably they attracted a following. To retain status among their so-called peers and to continue to hold attention, they had to proceed from one spectacular performance to another pily, often a little more vicious. Eventually most of them yielded to the pressures imposed upon them and recogn the stupidity of their ways. If they didn't, they could graduate from petty annoyance to serious disruption and finally some form of crime

Too Much Verbalizing

Any number of justifications have been advanced for the trend in recent times. We have progressed rapidly along the road to permissiveness because. part, affluence-has allowed us the kind vides a poor example for the young and we've been too busy with our own concerns to give much more than lip service to the kind of direction mature people should give children. In the process we've developed the habit of verbalizing about different life-styles, cultures and counter-cultures and the rights of the individual to do his own thing. In the conversation, we've. tended to lose sight of some of the es-sential rules that make life viable in a complex modern society.

So now we read about incidents arising from the Rolling Stones' Vancouver or any other occasion that promises an opportunity for juvenile licence. But while we're shaking our heads, let's not forget the figures. Seven behaved for every one who misbehaved out-side the Pacific Coliseum. Let's try to determine why the seven behaved and apply the knowledge to the avoidance of bad behavior by minerities of the future As the old song suggests, there's a chance here to accentuate the positive.

Economists Laughing at Prophets of Doom

By ANTHONY HARRIS The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — Economists are not in general known as the cheeriest group of students in the world, but on one subject they seem united in optimism. They have refused to be impressed by the fashionable documents by school of warry doomwatch school of worry about growth and pollution

Of coerse, economists, like anyone else, like clean air and oil-free beaches; they do not deny that there is a prob-lem. But they emphatically deny that there is an insoluble problem, or one that can only be solved by abandoning the whole search for material well-being which is the subject-matter of economics

It is the more generalized jeremiads that move them to derision; the greater the pre-dicted disaster, the louder they laugh.

Now it is most impressive to find economists united on any subject, but it must also he recognized that economists have something of a vested interest against the doom-watchers. If it were widely accepted that production and growth were evil in them-selves, it is very hard to see what would be left as a subcan build economic theory on

The desert island has resources, choices between consumption and investment; the lifeboat has only a fixed stock of material for survival. If it is never to reach a saving shore, we can only decide how long to spend dying

Nevertheless, the logical arent seems to me irrefut-. If we fair to solve the pollution problem, it will be because we are unwilling to pay the cost of a clean environment; economics cannot wish that cost away, or dicportunity and the cost.

The resources question is more difficult. If we really do face a critical shortage of re-sources, then the problem becomes non-economic, as I have said; so the economic answer is to deny the scientistic assertion. This is done mainly on three grounds.

The law of constant reserves. I can remember that a little over 30 years ago, world oil reserves were put at dor tells me that more than 50 years ago, there was less than 15 years supply. A couple of centuries ago, of course, the world had no known oil reserves at all.

* * * Services use no resources. It is argued that economic growth is, in any case, going increasingly to services rather than goods; if the cost of materials rises, this trend will get stronger. Material needs, indeed, may well be more closely proportional to population in a rich country than to income levels.

All these arguments impress me quite strongly and yet they leave me a little uneasy. First, it is clear that there must be some limit to material consumption, and though it may be much more distant than the doom-watchers suppose, it may not be so ramble that we can be more it altogether. Congestion, whether of leisure resorts, roads, or simply that dictated by urbanization, means that like Alice, we have constantly to run faster to stay in the same place, and if roads generate traffic and food supplies support popul-tion growth, growth becomes self-defeating.

MR. ANTHONY DAVIS

The directors of Shawnigan Beach Estates Ltd. are pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Anthony Davis as Resident Manager of the Shaw-nigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club.

Mr. Davis returns to the west coast after spending the past nine years in London, England, and brings to his new position an extensive background in food service and club management. During his time in London he was ower-manager of an exclusive gourmet food catering service and in addition more muted between London and Mallorca, Spain, where he managed the Club del Campo at Nova Valledemosa.

Mr. Davis spent a part of his youth in the Cobble Hill area and was a frequent summer guest at the Shawnigan Inn when it was known as the Shawnigan Beach Hotel. He graduated from the University of British Columbia and then spent several years in the Far East and Southeast Asia in an executive capacity. While in England, he completed post graduate studies in personnel and business management at the London School of Economics.

A keen sportsman, Mr. Davis is also interested in theatre work and he and his wife and three children look forward to their new residence at Shawnigan

Mr. Davis announces with pleasure the appointment of Mr. Vladimir Hosala as the new Chef at the Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club. Mr. Hosala graduated from one of Europe's leading hotel and restaurant training academies in his native Czechoslyakoia. He has many years experience in ll phases of food preparation and service and was with the world renowned Congress House Restaurant in Zurich, Switzerland, before coming to Canada four years ago. Prior to moving to the west coast, Mr. Hosala served in all departments of the many restaurants in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. A fine Chef and a welcome addition to the Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Coutry Club.

Mrs. Margaret Long has served admirably as accountant at the Shawnigan Inn for the past six years and Mr. Davis and the directors announce with pleasure her appointment as Assistant Manager.

These appointments are in keeping with the company's development program, which has included the complete renovation and refurbishment of the Shawnigan Lake Country Club in recent months. The Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club are an integral part of the outstanding development project now underway by Shawnigan Beach Estates Ltd. in the Shawnigan Lake area.

Mr. Davis and his courteous and capable staff extend a cordial invitation to residents of the Victoria area to visit the Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club. Call 743-2312 or write to P.O. Box 40, Shawnigan, for reservations or further information,

Sell-Out Concert Ends Up in Red

By RON ROBINSON CJVI Program Director

Incredible as it may seem that Rolling. Stones rock concert in Vancouver that attracted 17,000 fans (and several hundred hooligans) actually ended up in the red, as far as the promoters are concerned. Despite a gross box office of more than $100,000 the economics of this type of concert worked against Northwest Releasing, the Seattle-based company that arranged for the Stones' North-American tour to kick off at the Pacific Coliseum last weekend. The contract calls for a spit of 70 per cent for the performers and 30 per cent for the promoter. From his cut the permoter has to pay all expenses, including in this case the $15,000 for supplementary police protection! That figure reportedly brought the total expenses to $37,000, which translates as a $7,000 loss on a show that sold out in just about an hour of ticket selling, and stands as probably the largest single-night box office in Vancouver's history!

Anyone for concert promoting?

A man who, for 20 years, has had the respect of both music and broadcast industries, Bill Gavin, raised an interesting point in his most recent trade newsletter. A few excerpts follow from his treatise on contemporary music: "The Rock Revolution (1955-1969) encouraged uncounted thousands of young people to get into music. Never in history had so many would-be musicians been so highly motivated to practice for the improvement of their technique. ... As a result, by a massive process of survival of the fittest, the U.S., Canada and Britain now have more highly skilled musicians ... than ever before ... Unfortunately, vocal quality does not improve with practice, and so the average level of singing skill is far below the musicianship ...

"For a good many years this discrepancy made little goldfference. Younger record buyers didn't seem to care whether the singers shouted, screamed, moaned, rasped, squeaked, mumbled or sang on pitch... Today there seems to be a change. Record buyers and radio listeners are responding most favorably to records with more pleasing vocal quality, more understandable lyrics.

"There simply are not enough good singers to go around. There are, however, more than enough excellent musicians, arrangers and producers. We may, in fact, be on the verge of a new instrumental revolution . . . While we are not in any imminent danger of returning to the big band days (of cherished memory), the current impact of such asys to chemical memory, the current mison of such instrumental vehicles as motion picture sound tracks, television themes and commercials suggests that (radio) programmers should begin taking a more tolerant attitude toward "les chants sans paroles."

TORONTO (CP) — English actor Donald Pleasence thinks the potential for a Canadian film industry can be fantastic if Canadian filmmakers forget for the time being about nationalism and look for things that will attract international interest.

Mr. Pleasence, 52, who is here for the filming of a fea-ture, Wedding in White, said in an interview that at the same time as filmmakers are developing internationally-flavored films they can also "keep an eye on more inter-esting national things which may turn out eventually more successful."

Wheat-Is It the Common Denomina

By JOHN BURNS Special to the Times PEKING — A Pe PEKING - A Peking puzzler: what is the link, if any, between the weather on the North China plain, the war in Vietnam and the politi-cal fortunes of the Trudeau government on the Canadians Prairies? Answer: Wheat — or so at least it seems to ob-servers in Peking who have been studying Canada's latest hundred-million-dollar wheat

The sale, which brought China's imports of Canadian wheat to a record for a single wheat to a record for a single year, appears to have been prompted to some extent by the drought currently affecting wheat-growing areas on the North China plain.

Observers, suggest that the upward revision of China's wheat requirements for the year may also have resulted from a stepup in Chinese aid to the North Vietnamese, who have been receiving substantial shipments of foodstuffs from China for several years.

It is not the Chinese habit to discuss the reasons for their wheat purchases, least of all with wheat board negotiators from Winnipeg. Officials have confirmed, nevertheless, that the Peking area is suffering from shortages. Reports reaching the capital suggest that the condition is common to much of the wheat-growing region.

The Chinese press has been carrying fewer upbeat stories on the spring grain harvest than is normal for this time of year. This might indicate that the unbroken string of bumper harvests which has been claimed for each of the past 10 years is threatened this year.

It is also known that the

Yet there is another side to Brodeur's writing. Many of these stories are gentle stu-dies of human relationships. Usually they concern one man (the author under various guises) and his parents, wife, children or griffriend. "Be-hind The Moon," for example, traces in a wistful but search-ing manner the way an Amering manner the way an American soldier falls in, and then imperceptibly out of love with

Because they were written over a period of 15 years, these stories have a widerange of subject matter. Yet Brodeur's speaking voice is consistent in all of them. The cate and personal duets to an amusing story in which a writer re-tells an event in his youth through a pastiche of Hemingway and Fitzgerald.

The book consists of three The book consists of three novellas set in the rural South West of America. The middle section, the long title story, is to my mind the least successful part of the book. In it, he celebrates the instinctive sexuality and frustrated talents of six young friends.

Following their story is like watching the flickering shad-ows of an old movie. Each short chapter forms a sepa-rate incident, usually of a fiercely sexual nature, and the events are never allowed terial here that seems waiting for a long novel. As it stands, the writing appears preten-tious and the situations con-trived for shock effect.

The other two stories, how ever, are thoroughly remarkable. The first one, "The Call," is a delicate study of a young boy's feelings as he tries to cope with the rituals of his stepmother's funeral. Weston's strength lies in his ability to probe a set of primitive characters who have no formal education yet who feel passionately about life, love

While MacLennan finds some of the essays obvious, today, and notes that reread-ing them throws the subject into a wry perspective, it is amazing how well they stand up, 20 years later. There are some changes, of course.

It is probably not true today that "Certainly no part of the Roman Catholic world is more devout than French-speaking Canada" ("Help speaking Canada" ("Help Thou Mine Unbelief"). The teachers' salaries he deplores in "The Tyranny of the Sun day Suit" have been consider ably improved. On the whole however, the MacLennan point of view remains as authentic, homespun, frank, searching and desperately Canadian as ever.

While MacLennan has lived for years in Montreal and knows and loves Quebec, for me he is at his best when he writes about his home pro-ince, Nova Scotia. serve the city to the maximum of their skills.

Something of the sort was intended, a sort of tri-partite, but it hasn't actually worked too well. When the school of the proper party of the sort of music — now conservatory — was in its early planning stage the intention was that it should be a training school for future orchestra players.

Inevitably — and happily its scope has greatly broa-dened but it has served well as originally envisaged. The only breakdown has been in the concept of the string de-partment head and concert master post of the symphony being a joint appointment.

On the other hand, when UVic Fine Arts arranged the affiliation agreement with the conservatory, the 'understanding was that the practical teaching should be provided by the Conservatory, but here too, there have been breakdowns.

A well co-ordinated working arrangement between these in-fluential three, with everybody concerned putting shoulders to it to see the does work is vital to the development, even the continuity, of our musical life.

Judge Woolsey could have told us in 1933. In fact, he did. "My considered opinion, after long reflection," the judge said, "is that whilst in many places the effect of Ulysses is the reader undoubtedly is somewhat emetic nowhere does it tend to be an aphrodis-

It did take a very long time to learn that. Even in the 1950s when Ulysses finally made its way into Canadian university booklists, discus-sion of the book still was dominated more by moral legal questions than by liter-ary consideration.

Those days are thankfully

But now a new problem appears. In our enlightenment have we lost some of the sur-prises of the innocent eye? Has our sensibility replaced prudishness with an equally destruction indedness? destructive jadedness?

Take for example Joseph Strick's film based on Ulysses and so titled (although it real-ly should be called "From Ulysses") which is not a new film but is making the rounds of the movie, houses

Here, in three portraits drawn from Joyce's assortment of guilt-ridden, self-con-suming characters, there is not only no aphrodisiac, there is little adrenalin either. It's as if the joy of the original work had been jost because it's not really naughty any

Although it necessarily con sists only of extracts from the original, the filmplay is a very dutiful work in which much of Joyce. - his language and imagery — is in-cluded.

But even with the language, the imagery and the addition of the camera, there is a great blandness about the whole venture.

Not that the film is not well done. Like the book, it is a sensitive study of people caught in one single ordinary day in Dublin in 1904. Like the book too, the film is a slice not only of life but also of fan-

The main roles - Dedalus played by Milo O'Shea, Molly by Barbara Jefford and Bloom by Maurice Roeves are very convincing.

The portrait of Leopold

Bloom is particularly well created by Roeves who gives great depth to the character of the Jewish merchant cheated by his wife, misused by his friends, haunted by his mem ries, yet pathetically hopeful.

But even after such a fine rendering, there is a heavy "so what?" that follows.

The last third of the film is taken up with Molly's solilo quy, the mind-wandering of a lascivious and unfaithful woman who, at once, confesses and boasts to herself in a bitter flow of words and memories. It should be very exciting, but it's rather Anna lived in Victoria dur ing her youth, went to high school here. And on gradua-tion moved to Vancouver and UBC. She became a teacher, married, taught school, raised a child and then one day, having been in Vancouver seven years, having "worked" on her marriage for the last two of harriage for the last two or those years, suggested to her husband that they go to Esaien on California's Big Sur, a centre now famous for developing the group thera-pies of touch awareness. Nude therapy, meditation and mas-sage promised social and physical health.

Anna's husband did not wish to go. But within three weeks of making her huge decision, Anna had exchanged cision. Anna had exchanged her car for a camper bus and was travelling south. At Esalen, she worked on staff, cooking for 80. Later, so she could stay on, she managed Esalen's laundry. She was on the Big Sur for over a year

Boycott Brews in Back Room

By HACK KEATING Times Staff

Add a touch of goalmouth polish to the Victoria Regals, and Darryl Wallace might not have been the shining star of Friday night's Premier Soccer League game.

The 19-year-old Powell The B-year-on-River native emerged as the game's star in providing Van-country Eintracht with a 2-1 victory over Victoria Regals at Royal Athletic Park.

Eintracht's goalkeeper faced a steady barrage of shots and was by far the busi-est man on the field.

Wallace, who chalked up six hutouts as rookie this year with Paul's in the Pacific Coast League, was beaten several times but nonetheless allowed only one goal.

BOUNCES HELP

His quick cat-like reflexes, ing and just tough-luck around the net, frustrated the Regals time after time. Vic-toria's hard-luck and erratic ers, powered Eintracht into first place.

"Our approach work is first ass," said Brian Hughes, Victoria's player-coach, after the game. "The finish has a the game. "The nnish has a lot to be desired. We're just popping them in,"

Jailed Boxer's Eligibility Investigated

MUNICH, Germany (AP) - Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, has questioned Bobby Lee Hunter's eligibility for the Olympics, because he doubts that the jailed American boxer has lived according to the spirit of the Games.

Hunter is the National Ama-teur Athletic Union flyweight champion who you a bronze medal for the United States in the Pan-American Games. But he also is a prisoner at the correctional institution at Manning, S.C., serving an Manning, S.C., serving an 18-year term for manslaugh-

Brundage Friday said off-Amateur Boxing Association are examining the 21-year-old fighter's eligibility in view of his background, which includes killing a man in a knife fight in Charleston, S.C., in 10-27

He said he was't sure Hunter could compete in the Games because of the basic regulations that athletes must have lived in the spirit of the Olympic Rules, the Games and the Olympic idea.

Hunter, however, was allowed to fight in the Pan-Am Games, which are conducted under very similar rules. U.S. officials said they were hesitant about Hunter's participa-tion in the Pan-Am competition because of international image, but approval for the boxer's inclusion on the American team was granted.

Brundage, who has created storms of controversy because of pursuit of pure amateurism and has faced opposi-tin within the IOC for the zea-lousness of his pursuit, was backed Friday in his state-ments by Willi Daume, pres-ident of the Munich Organizing Committee, who said he felt Hunter could hardly be called an example for youth.

Hunter is not yet on the Olympic team. He still must qualify in the trials at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, Tex., on July 19-22. Bobby Lewis, coach of the U.S. Olympic boyers said be

THE U.S. CHAMPIONSHIP

The U.S. Championship of 1972 was held in New York last month and ended in a three-way tie between two New Yorkers, Robert Byrne and Sammy Reshevsky, and Lubomir Kayalek of Washington, D.C. They scored nine points out of 13 and will have to have a playoff to decide which two of the three will qualify for the Interzonals. Other high scorers were Larry Evans with 8½; Pal Benko with 8; Greg DeFotis and Rev. William Lombardy, 7½; Edmar Mednis, 7, and William Martz and Arthur Blantier, 8½ Bisguier, 61/2.

It was a triumph for New-York, six of the top 10 players coming from that state.

william Martdz, a talented young player from Wisconsin, started, out beautifully, losing only one of his first seven games. Here are some notes from him on the match:

"The 1972 United States Championship presented a worthy battleground for both veteran Grandmasters and rising young stars. Despite the absence of Robert Fischer. competition was keen for the two qualifying spots in next year's Interconal Seven of the eight active U.S. Grandmasters participated in the 14-player round-robin event. Yarrows Man Promoted

George Forbes, technical manager for Yarrows, has been promoted to marine sales and industrial manager for Burrard Dry Dook Company of North Vancouver and Yarrows Ltd, of Victoria.

The promotion is part of a continuing merger of management of the two companies following their purchase this spring by Cornat Industries Ltd., headed by Peter Paul Saunders of Vancouver.

Victoria staff, except for management, has not been af-fected by the merger. There continues to be about 450 employees at Yarrows.

Forbes begins immediately to work out of the Vancouver office of Burrard Dry Dock.

He will commute at first but, after school gets out, will

In his new post he will be incharge of new ship and barge construction sales and the industrial engineering departments of the two yards.

The Burrard Yarrows com-pany operates the largest shipbuilding and ship repair yard on Canada's west coast.

Before the purchase by Cornat, Yarrows Ltd was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Burrard, which was owned by Wallace Enterprises Ltd.

No technical manager will be appointed at Yarrows to re-place Forbes but with his de-parture Rudolph De Lange Boom will be promoted to chief draughtsman.

The answer to this baffling question is simple: If you came into White Spot for breakfast, then chances are the egg came first. If you came in for lunch, dinner, or a snack, then it was the Pickin's - Chicken Pickin's more than likely,

Either way, you're in for some good cooking. Because White Spot's way with an egg or chicken dish is well known to B.C. food lovers.

One reason is freshness. We have poultry experts working on White Spot's own chicken farms. People who know how to raise the plumpest, most delicious chicken you've ever tasted. And the same goes for eggs. We know how to coax our hens into delivering eggs fit for a feast.

The proof of all this awaits you on the White Spot menu. Because our fresh produce is backed up by special recipes and cooking know-how. Crisp golden chicken and eggs done just the way you like 'em.

You only retire once. Enjoy it.

All your active life you are part of a community. A family community. A social community.

society changes. Your family grows up and moves away.

You retire. To what? We believe the answer should be a new community: a congenial community of your contemporaries in an environment that sets the highest standards for your personal comfort and convenience - but where you set your own standards for privacy or sociability, activity or relaxation.

That's why we built Oak Bay Manor in Victoria a new concept in retirement living.

For example, you enjoy the privacy of your own beautifully appointed one, two or three room suite, Each has a private bathroom, soundproofing, fine furnishings and your personal balcony overlooking 5 acres of and some of Victoria's Then, almost imperceptibly, most breathtaking views.

It's your home. The facilities you enjoy are the finest that $5,000,000 can command: a swimming pool, whirlpooland sauna; a masseur, masseuse and resident nurse; exercise rooms, lounges, hobby rooms, a billiard room, reading room and coffee shop.

But the scoffing name stuck, and Methodists came to espouse it as their ouwn, even though the "methodical" sys-tem of seeking salvation was dropped at the outset.

A similar case is that of the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers.

That name, now used in a positive sense, first was huried at them in derision µ a period when they were under severe persecution in 17th-century England.

Put on trial before a magistrate in Derby, their founder,

George Fox, told the judge he should "tremble at the word of God." Thereafter, scoffers

Pruning for Control Of Size, Flowering

jack beastall

Shrubs suitable for the easy-to-care-for garden have one fault; they tend to grow out of bounds quickly.

Possibly we are incorrect in calling this a fault. The fact they are able to grow to massive proportions with a minimum of care is an attribute rather

One consolation is this. Most shrubs of rapid growth can be pruned severely much more severely than slower growing relatives.

Home gardeners not only have different attitudes to-wards pruning, they have dif-ferent ideas as to what constitutes pruning and the basic idea behind the practice.

One gardner prowis around with secateurs in haid, snip ping right and left, while another tackles every shrub and tree with a saw in true car-penter fashion.

TIMID TYPE

Then we have the timid gar-dener who couldn't possibly cut a plant in case it died.

Pruning can produce a variety of results. It can totally distort the natural habit of a plant, beneficially as in to-plary work, or detrimentally when applied indiscrim-

Done at the wrong time, or in the wrong place, it can prevent a plant from ever producing a flower, or when correctly applied it can in-crease the size and the flo-wering potential.

with control of size and in-creased flower production as it applies to spring flowering

As examples we have chosen three choice shrubs of the late spring garden. Weigela, Buddleia globosa, and Kerria japonica. All are free growing and all benefit from severe pruning right from the first year in the garden.

The first, Weigela, was named in honor of C. F. Weigel, professor of botany at Greifswald in the late 18th century. Carl Linne latinize the name by adding the later. the name by adding the letter 'a' so that the plant name became Vy-ge-l-a (not Vy-

Many hybrid forms of Wei-gela are available today in cluding "Fairy", deep pink; "Bristol Ruby", red; and Weigela rosea variegata with pale pink flowers that are almost nsignificant among the gold and green leaves.

When pruning is completed, this plant will be about six to seven inches high, and the new growths will extend to about 24 inches by fall.

LONDON (AP) - Lord Goodman, chairman of the arts council and a veteran diplomatic troubleshooter for disjoinatic troubleshooter for the British government, has been named as president of the Institute of Jewish af-fairs. He succeeds the late lord Sieff, the head of the Marks and Spencer chain stores, at the institute which sathers research on the condi-tions under which Jews live.

Several excellent care-free of Butterfly-bush because the nectar in the packed spikes of tiny flowers is attractive to moths and butterflies.

The spring flowering relative shown at B is Buddiela globosa with the same tiny flowers packed into balls of deep gold. Many gardeners growing this plant, not knowing its proper name refer to ing its proper name, refer to it as "my orange tree", which is a very apt description.

Like the fall flowering Buddleias which were severeblooming type needs the same treatment when the majority of blooms have faded.

The shoot in the illustration is about four feet long. It will be cut back to a strong new growth low down, removing about three feet of stem and leaves.

CLERICAL NAMESAKE

Named after Rev. Again Buddle, a vicar of Farn-bridge, England, the name was latinized by adding "ia" making it "bud-lee-a".

Our last example, Kerria, was named in honor of William Kerr, a plant collector for the Kew Gardens. England, who introduced the shrubby, single flowered elimber known as Kerria japonica (of known). ponica (of Japan).

This original introduction is seldom seen today, instead we grow a double flowered form, called Kerria Japonica flore plena (double flowers).

If there was ever an in-troduced plant capable of car-ing for itself it was Kerria. A ing for itself it was kerria. A single plant soon spreads into a thicket by underground stems, making it necessary to control it by digging up por-tions that go out of bounds.

But its mass of medium yellow flowers along leafless bright green stems in spring is so delightful we overlook its invasion nature.

These stems tend to die back after flowering, leaving a forest of dead shoots proa torest of nead shoots pro-jecting among the mass of new growths made each year. This unsightly array never materializes if the flowered shoots are cut well back to a strong side growth on the lower part of the stem. DRAWING 'C'

On the Kerria you will find several of these new growths between the end of the flowered portion and the base of the stem. In drawing C the cut is shown just above the uppermost of these growths, but there is nothing against cutting the concinuous and the control of th cutting to one further down the stem.

Another thing I have noticed is that a well pruned clump of Kerria does not seem to spread as rapidly as one which is not pruned, prob-ably because the making of new growths on the pruned stems takes the energy that would otherwise be expended in root extension. All spring flowering shrubs which have finished blooming. or will finish by the end of June, are pruned when the main mass of flowers fade. The flowered sections are removed on most at a poi femoved on most at a point where one or more side growths are evident.

These new growths will elongate rapidly in the next month or so ripen well in the warmth of August and early September when flower buds for next spring are initiated.

All spring flowering shrubs near blossoms on wood made the previous year, therefore cannot be pruned before flowering.

Summer and fall flowering summer and fall flowering shrubs (from July on) bloom on new growths made this year after pruning is done in March and early April as growth starts.

No flowering shrubs are pruned here in summer or fall.

African Revolutionary Co-Ordinates Health Plan

TAMBICO. Portuguese Guinea (AP) — Manuel Boal propped his Soviet burp gun against a log and began a lec-ture on health.

"The body is like a house," he said in Portuguese, his dark eyes sweeping across 400 persons seated in a jungle clearing. "It needs a good foundation."

There was a murmun agreement from the colorfully robed women. Stern glences cautioned youngsters giggling in the background.

Then, attacking a chronic problem in Africa, he pointed to the children and spoke earnestly to the mothers. "Breast feeding is good for little children," he said.

in the developed world. But this is Tambico, a lovely bush this is Tambico, a lovely bush village of perhaps 2,000 inhabitants hidden deep in the rebel-held territory of this Portuguese colony in West Africa, where black men are fighting an armed struggle for independence from white men in Lisbon.

Boal, who is 37 but fooks younger, is a black revolutionary with a stethoscope.

STUDIES MEDICINE

He was a medical student at the University of Lisbon who later specialized in pediatrics at the University of Paris. Then he joined the ranks of the African Party for the Independence of Portuguese Guinea and the Cape Verde Islands—PAIGC.

But six months after birth, that is not enough. After six months a child needs maize, eggs, fish, meat and fruit, lots of fruit, so he can grow strong like a house."

It was a simple lesson in nutrition, hardly noteworthy more than nine years in this hot, inhospitable land.

Boal wears neatly pressed army fatigues. He projects the image of an African Che Guevara, but laughs at that comparison.

"I'm not interested in politics." he insists. "I don't have the temperament for it."

His job is to co-ordinate the rebel medical program in the battle regions and villages in the "liberated zone." Rebel leaders say this task involves the health of half the population of 800,000.

The guerrillas run seven field hospitals inside Portuguese Guinea and two others in the independent Republic of Guinea, a neighboring country where the PAIGC maintains its headquarters.

VANCOUVER (CP) — On a summer day in 1960, George Rokanass arrived in Canada aboard a ship after an 11-day trip from his native Greece. With $15 in spending money and just a smattering of the English language, he boarded a train in Hailfax and headed west, destination Regina.

Although getting the basics in Regina, he says his most valuable experience was gained at fogging camps where satisfying appetites doesn't come easy.

"I like to experiment in cooking, put my time in and make something different like cabbage rolls. For instance, at the camp, when I was cooking beef stew, I'd add ingredients that the regular cook couldn't be bothered with. It's a harder way of

'Skid Road' Program Takes to the Street

A new $14,600 federal grant will allow a rehabilitation program aimed at Victoria's "skid road" alcoholies to extend its operations, including help for young transients with problems, says the program's spokesman Myron Pentz.

The Committee of Concern on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse was formed in January of this year with seven fultime counsellors — all recovering alcoholics with special knowledge of the "deretict sub-culture" of Victoria's Old Town — under an administrative assistant.

Policewomen Find Male Acceptance A Slow Process

Special to The Times

in the U.S.

NEW YORK - A small but growing number of police-women are patrolling the streets of U.S. cities and responding to emergency calls in exactly the same way as male policemen.

One reason for the movement of women into what has traditionally been the male world of flashing lights and screaming sirens appears to be the belief that women tend to be less threatening than men and thus prompt less hostile reaction from the pub-

Generally, male patrolmen are nonplussed when they are assigned a woman partner on street duty, but they seem get used to it fairly quickly.

At the same time, police officials say they are wary of putting married women, par-ticularly those with children, in dangerous jobs, apparently under the belief that mothers should be exposel to danger less readily than fathers.

"I was a little reluctant about riding with a female partner," Patrolman Daniel said, but after a few hours relaxed and realized that it had a great psychological effect on people in general. It was very beneficial in Liberty City (Miami's black area), especially in handling domes-tic disturbances. Women con-sidered a policewoman as one of their own.

The extent of the growing trend toward a bigger role for women in police work and in the merits of it are discussed in a report on Women in Policing, to be published by the Police Foundation, a group established several years ago by the Ford Foundation to de velop better approaches to police problems foundation's assistant directhat the major reason for re-commending a wider role for women is that it appears to reduce "the incidence of vio-lence between police officrs and citizens when women are assigned to patrol."

Moreover, women undercover agents seem to have the same quieting effect on drug sellers and others they deal

Mrs. Milton believes that a major reason for widening the opportunities for women in law enforcement is that the sex quotas maintained by many police departments and the separate promotion tests violate federal and state laws outlawing discrimination against women

Fancy-Clad Women Bringing The Men Out In Hordes

Girls like Judi at Empress pub good for business

Chef Anthony's Betty says formal wear conducive to good work

By SANDI SHREVE Times Staff

Local dining and cocktail lounge managers are discovering that fancy-clad women bring better business than swank

So they're wrapping their waitresses in everything from hot pants — that leave little to the imagination on bottom—to low-cut, see-through harem outlits — that leave less to the imagination on top.

Although most waitresses agree that uniforms are more practical than street clothes, some dislike the costumes man-

In the Colony Motor Inn's cocktail lounge, waitresses wear hot pants and men's black and white calypso-style shirts which must fall short of the hot pants hem.

Although bartender Lynn Hancock says women working in bars should expect to have to "show some leg," she disagrees with the idea that it prings better business.

"I think if you are a good waitress — nicely dressed the business will be just as good."

Some hot-panted waitresses would rather not discuss their clothes. When questioned about their outfits, they give you an icy-eyed you-should-know look or casual "they are cool and comfortable" reply.

And there are places, like the Cherry Bank Steakhouse, where you just don't/mention hot pants. Because there, waitresses are provided with something a bit more spicy. They were black dresses, skirts puffed out by crinolines and trimmed with fuzzy red lace frills. Sleeves are slit and little red aprons have big bows at back.

'Show Leg' Abandoned

Manager Cam Dickson thinks these costumes are the most attractive and distinguished" uniforms in town. His waitresses apparently agree with him.

Occasionally the "show some leg" idea is forfeited to match waitresses with interior decor-

Such is the case at the Century Inn where waitresses in the Persian Room are adorned in harem outfits. Black see-through jumpsuits, cuffed at the ankle, billow out in true pantaloon form to the waist where gold chain belts catch the eye. This uniform comes complete with the very popular low-cut top.

Management here ciaims its outfits are the most distinc-tive in town but would not allow them to be photographed. And waitress Cheryl Alexander complains they are "ugly and

At places such as the Churchill's Keg Room, where managers don't insist-upon uniforms, employees say they would prefer them because their own clothes get ruined by spillage.

But whether or not waitresses like uniforms, where certain attire is required there is no question about wearing it

When management at one lounge demanded its waitresses wear hot pants last winter, it discovered one girl coming to work in long pants. She has subsequently been fired and claims this was one

And just for the record, it isn't only waitresses who are required to get all dolled up for work. Often waiters find themselves in the same delicate predicament.

At the Empress Bengal Room, for example, waiters come on looking like little toy soldiers, their outfits a cross between beliboy and RCMP uniforms.

These costumes include red jackets, trimmed with gold buttons and fringe, black pants sporting a thin red stripe down the sides and a tiny gold cap to top everything off.

One waiter says the men dislike these "ugly" uniforms because they are too warm. When asked about the cap, he managed to sputter, "they are just silly."

Women Plan Bias Attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women attending the first national conference on business opportunities for women planned strategy sessions Friday for overcoming the barriers they say have been erected against them.

An estimated 400-500 women, mostly black, put in two long working days in which they described indignities their sex suffers in the business world. They hope to launch an ef-

No Clues to Sex

I was intrigued by the letter from the woman concerned from the woman concerned about privacy in the matter of marital status. I believe her purposes would be better served by using initials rather than the abbreviation "Ms." In the matter of correspondence, this ploy has the further advantage of giving no clues as to the sex of the writer.

In this connection, it is in In this connection, it is in-teresting to note that in the Soviet Union (frequently cited as a model for sexual equality by extremists in the feminine liberation movement) the Russian last name indicates the sex of an individual, thus negating this particular advantage of using initials.

I find these absurd efforts to obliterate differences on the assumption that this will produce the miracle of equali-ty one of the more entertain-ing phenomena of the present age. — Sincerely, T. P. Ron-domanski.

DEAR T.P.: Very interesting. To further illustrate your point, a Russian man would be "Romanov," and a woman, "Romanova,"

DEAR ABBA: Once again, a letter in your column from a man complaining because his wife doesn't give him enough "affection." ("I can't get her into the bedroom," he

Beautiful squares joined in a very striking manner make up the most unusual ensemble of the day. The yoke of the cape and the bodice of the dress are done in basic double crochet which offsets the lovely lacy squares. A waistband of circlets match the neck trim of the cape and the result is positively charming. Even a beginner can make this "special occasion" dress which is also a real velocity that the control of the property and t nore Hydro's request, Bennett snapped. 'I'm not answering supplementary questions.' Hydro's plan, which must be approved by the government's treasury board, has angered companies bidding for a proposed natural gas pipeline to the Island.

The pipeline proposals now are being studied at public hearings in Vancouver by the B.C. Public Utilities Commission. The economics of the gas pipeline will depend on whether gas is to be used as the source of future power for Vancouver Island. Vancouver Island.

Hydro spokesmen threw the PUC hearings into confusion when they disclosed that ment permission to run more power lines to the island to take care of its electricity needs until 1979. Hydro is also one of the five companies seeking the right to build the gas pipeline.

Bennett told reporters:

"It is government policy that future electric power for Vancouver Island will come

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness will be demon-strated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, June 12 and 13.

This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Special-ists.

In their announcement, they named specialist I. Edgar to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the hotel Sussex.

"Save-Your-Hair Day"

YOU CAN'T AFFORD BALDNESS

It is surprising how many people neglect the warming signs, and sometimes they are quite unaware of the damage they are doing. But you can recognize the danger signals—falling hair, itching scalp, too-oily or too dry hair and dandruff—these are sill signs that your hair could be in a poor unhealthy condition. Pay attention to these danger signals and seek professional help.

Dear Dr. Miller: I have heard that feeding extra grit to a bird will stop feather pulling. How do you know how much to feed?—8.9.

Dear 8.9.: Forget it. It won't work. In theory, if you can get the bird to grab grit instead of feathers, it might but this is impractical because the bird wouldn't. Even if it did, it would eventually have serious stomach problems from too much grit. While a bird can carpy a smattering of grit successfully, the amount determines whether it is slightly beneficial, detrimental, or downright dangerous. If your leather plucker has a nutritional need, and this is frequently the case, grit isn't going to fill it.

your dog to get in a draft. So how do I keep her alive when the temperature is 90 degrees outside and 110 in the car? -K.Q.

Dear K.Q.: Ideally, you would turn on the air conditioner long before the car reached that stage. Lacking one, you would expose Puddles to all of the drafts possible. At that point, heat stroke or heat exhaustion is a much greater threat than pneumo-nia. If the winds are all hot, too, let her lie on a wet towel or get her completely wet. And, of course, be sure Pud-dles has palatable drinking water continually available.

A prison official explained that, insofar as was possible, Coldingley was designed to resemble the outside world; convicts work a 40-hour week in contrast to the 28-hour average at most other prisons; they are paid in cash, not credit; they can, within certain limits, be "hired" and "fired" from any particular job within the prison; the products of the prison industry are marketed in direct competition with civilian businesses.

'The prison does not coddle its. convicts. 'Outside the fence it's a hard, wicked world," said the official, and the prison tries to imitate that world as much as possible, NO GUARDS INSIDE

At present, Coldingley has 222 prisoners. The total capacity is 296. Men from the region are sent to the prison when there are job vacancies, providing they meet certain criteria. They must be over 21, they must have between nine months and three years left of their sentence to serve, they must be physically and mentally able to work a 40-hour week and they must have the potential to develop work habits.

CANADIAN HISTORY . . . SWEET AND SOUR

PEKING — Over cups of tea served in the reception room of Peking's No. 31 middle school, a group of 20 high school students from Hamilton yesterday heard one of the most remarkable potted instories of Canada that a Canadian posted is one likely to be compared. abroad is ever likely to hear.

The amateur historian, a 15-year-old Red Guard named Hou Ning, told his listeners that while Canada and China have different social systems today, they share a common past of imperialist exploitation.

Answering a Hamilton student who asked whether Chinese students student other social systems than their own, Hou said he had learned how British imperialists had carried out "exploitation and oppression" in Canada during the days of

"I learned, too, how after many years of suffering the Canadian people fought with the American people against Beitish impertalism, overthrowing their masters and winning their independence," he said.

Even before the interpreter had completed his symogous of the remarks the Hamilton students were maranting among themselves, apparently eager to set the Chinese boy straight with a short-run-through of Canadian history from the days of the Loyalist settlers in Upper Canada to the Statute of Westminster. In the event, however, the hope changed before any of them spoke out and the session work on to a close without a challenge being offered.

Later, some of the students were kicking themselves for saying nothing, while others, told that Hor had picted up his understanding of Canadian history from his sparetime read-ing little it was just as well that polody had embarrassed him for what could have been an honest confusion between American and Canadian history.

Confusion or not, it was obvious that the students found the remarks troubling, and to judge from the chatter about the incident later it is a fair hell that it will be one of the bettell remembered experiences that the students will have during their three weeks in Chine.

Vancouver Island's coastal strips are "melting away" behind private property signs, according to conservationists.

The provincial government — and Social Credit MLA Herb Bruch, whose Esquimalt riding includes the Sooke-Jordan River coastline — are to blame, the conservationists say.

Waterfront property should be bought by the government to preserve it for public use, says Elton Anderson, president of the B.C. Federation of Naturalists.

YOUR TAXES

those cases where it seems

The case and the law on which it was based, although decided under the old tax system, is still applicable under the reformed law.

The taxpayer was an employee of a potash mining company with a plant at Es-terhazy, Sask. In $1962 the company began operating its mine. It wanted to encourage its staff to live near the mine site, so it offered a home ownership plan.

For each employee who wanted to own his own home, the employer made available a building lot at a price of $18 per front foot. The lot was usually 70 feet.

The employer would then arrange a first mortgage from CMHC for 90 per cent of the construction cost and to cover the cost of the lot. In his way the employee would get his own home for a mini-mal down payment.

As a further incentive to promote a stable and perma-nent work force, the plan pro-vided that if the employee stayed with the company for five years, the second mortgage covering the price of the land would be written off and the debt forgiven.

This is not an uncommon plan, particularly in mining and remote communities where there is a desire to avoid the social and economic problems associated with "company towns."

The taxpayer took advantage of the home ownership plan, acquired the lot and gave the company a second mortgage for $1,662 representing the price of the land. Five years later, the employee having fulfilled the conditions of employment, the company tore up the second mortgage.

About a year later, during the 1968 decline in the western potash industry, the employee forced to leave

Because of the slowdown and lack of growth in the area, he was unable to sell the house until nearly a year and half later. When he finally found a buyer in 1970, he had to take a loss on the sale.

Enter the tax rules. The tax officials told him he had to pay tax on the $1,662 debt the employer had written off, because that was a benefit con-ferred upon him as an em-ployee. Such benefits are clearly taxable under both the old and the new system.

But then, in the words of tax review board chairman, keith Flannigan, what 'may have seemed to be as insult added to injury,' he found that the loss on the sale was not deductible, because it was a capital loss.

The court had no option but to rule the $1,662 'benefit'' taxable and the loss on sale as non-deductible. The two couldn't be offset.

It should be noted that although the case was only re-cently decided, the events occurred before the new tax

.There are many things wrong with even this more generous treatment. The $1,662 benefit could be taxed at a high rate while he was still employed, while the very limited loss deduction could occur in a year where he, because of the work layoff, has no taxable income against which to offset the loss.

Under these circumstances the employent benefit would be fully taxed while the loss associated with the loss of employment would still not be deductible.

It is no answer to say that if the parties had practiced careful tax planning, as many do, the tax result would have been different.

Nor is it realistic to expect the employee to be sufficiently sophisticated to be able to always understand the subfleties of the tax system. All he knows or cares about is that he bought a house, sold it at a loss and still has to pay tax.

The tax act containes provi discretion to levy tax in cer-tain circumstances even though the strict interpreta-tion of the law levies no tax.

Surely it is equally appropriate that the act be amended to allow the court the same discretion to waive tax where the circumstances seem equi

SHAWNIGAN INN AND

SHAWNIGAN LAKE COUNTRY CLUB

MR. ANTHONY DAVIS

The directors of Shawnigan Beach Estates Ltd. are pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Anthony Davis as Resident Manager of the Shaw-nigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club.

Mr. Davis returns to the west coast after spending the past nine years in London, England, and brings to his new position an extensive background in food service and club management. During his time in London he was ower-manager of an exclusive gourmet food catering service and in addition more recently commuted between London and Mallorca, Spain, where he managed the Club del Campo at Nova Valledemosa.

Mr. Davis spent a part of his youth in the Cobble Hill area and was a frequent summer guest at the Shawnigan Inn when it was known as the Shawnigan Beach Hotel. He graduated from the University of British Columbia and then spent several years in the Far East and Southeast Asia in an executive capacity. While in England, he completed post graduate studies in personnel and business management at the London School of Economics.

A keen sportsman, Mr. Davis is also interested in theatre work and he and his wife and three children look forward to their new residence at Shawnigan

Mr. Davis announces with pleasure the appointment of Mr. Vladimir Hosala as the new Chef at the Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club. Mr. Hosala graduated from one of Europe's leading hotel and restaurant training academies in his native Czechoslvakoia. He has many years experience in all phases of food preparation and service and was with the world renowned Congress House Restaurant in Zurich, Switzerland, before coming to Canada four years ago. Prior to moving to the west coast, Mr. Hosala served in all departments of the many restaurants in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. A fine Chef and a welcome addition to the Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Coutry Club.

Mrs. Margaret Long has served admirably as accountant at the Shawnigan Inn for the past six years and Mr. Davis and the directors announce with pleasure her appointment as Assistant Manager.

These appointments are in keeping with the company's development program, which has included the complete renovation and refurbishment of the Shawnigan Lake Country Club in recent months. The Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club are an integral part of the outstanding development project now underway by Shawnigan Beach Estates Ltd. in the Shawnigan Lake area.

Mr. Davis and his courteous and capable staff extend a cordial invitation to residents of the Victoria area to visit the Shawnigan Inn and Shawnigan Lake Country Club. Call 743-2312 or write to P.O. Box 40, Shawnigan, for reservations or further information.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness will be demon-strated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, June 12 and 13.

This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Special-ists.

In their announcement, they named specialist I.-Edgar to conduct the Victoria dilnic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 'I p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the hotel Sussex.

NOW IS THE TIME To carry out that long delayed resolution to "do something a bout your hair."

"Save-Your-Hair Day"

Set For MON. & TUES.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD
BALDNESS
It is surprishing how many people neglect the warning signs and sometimes they are quite unaware of the damage they are doing. But you can recognize the danger signals—falling hair, it wing scalp, too-oily or too dry hair and dandruff—these are all signs that your hair could be in a poor unhealthy condition. Pay attention to these danger signals and seek professional help.

DON'T PUT IT OFF

DON'T PUT IT OFF
Your hair is in better condition today than it will be next month or even next week. That's why we urge you to see the Harrison specialist before more damage is done.

GET THE EACTS
He will tell you what's wrong with your hair and scalp, 'what can and should be done about it.

grow healthy hair again.

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how the new Harrison method permits you to save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home. For an examination and discussion of your hair problems come to the hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday anytime between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. and askine desk clerk for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Committations are given in private.
